Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

New Delhi, 18 September

pple's decision to launch the eSIM-only IPhone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surphisingly, its sumped some Indian folks, too despite the availability of a physical SIM slot in the Indiacentic IPhone 14 series. This to because a large number of Apple's consumers in India get their IPhones at considerably cheaper rates from the US through their visiting relatives, friends, family, about compatibility with Indian networks and eSIM availability in India. Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know Indian telecomoperators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made IPhones. Others would either buy India models or may look at destinations such as Dubal, where the IPhones are more expensive than from the US but still cheaper than India. "Given that IPhones from the US will require eSIM support from day one in India, some tech-aware consumer may still continue to buy IPhones from there," said Prabhu Ram, head-Industry Intelligence Group at CyberMedia Research (CMR), "For oth-res, it will be prudent to buy new IPhones in India."

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August

an use sew York Jimes in Allguist 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the inals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind boggiling, simply because it was rare so see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nadal fourtimes. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never toold you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday tern is fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to. Eight years later, when he visited india as part of a team for the International Premier Tennis League (IPTL), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bi). The religious fanatics mi surrounding him hadn't. The lindir Gandhi Sadium was packed to the rafters for a tennis match! An ultimately meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, of the result of the course this meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive meaningless tennis match with no ranking points and recover meaning the points of the recover meaning the poi

and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, Twas there'.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger* would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but invisite or or that made most? You, an essenti ible cog that made the cog that made up the Federerverse, and the assorted diaspora it sprung. We knew this would stop sometime, because after all, the stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine—the GoAT machine—did 'evolve away from tennis' just a few weeks back. What remained though was how he would say it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional career away for good.

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well or surrently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is returning from professional trennis, after his participation in the Laver cut in the contrained of the professional trennis, after his participation in the Laver which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup liself. This team ternis tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyone to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smilling, camandrie plectures. Its first here editions were a riotous success, with Federer the constant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curlously enough

his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic have tournament together.
The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the The 2021 cuttors — the 2020 cuttors — the 2020 cuttors — the pandemic — was a minor blip. None of the blg three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of finand frolic. Viewers were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already immerses. Nadal and Djoković are both scheduled to play in it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a success. Due to Federer o Course. And for Federer, too. The Laver Cup, after all, exists pretty much as Federer's brainchild, and is as Federer's brainchild, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company Team8. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess.

It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, an icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into and profit machine rolled Into one. An unremarkable man — outside of his 20 Grand Slam titles, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backhone of every tennis parent's as small village in Switzerland, whose Nike,RY caps and the backhone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to considere what Unique of the state of the aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

pple's decision to launch the eSIM-only IPhone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surptisingly, its sumped some Indian folks, too, despite the availability of a physical SIM sior in the Indiacentric IPhone 14 series. This is because centric Phone 14 series. This is because a bayen cumber of Apple's consumers in India get their Phones at considerably cheaper rates from the US through their visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly about compatibility with Indian networks and eSIM availability in India. Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know Indian telecomoperators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made iPhones. Others would either buty India models or may look at destinations such as Dubal, where the Phones are more expensive than from

In India, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium smartphones such as Samsung Galaxy S-series, Google Pixel series and Apple IPhones. This hybrid SIM arrangement is expected to remain the choice of com-

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

David Foster Wallace's definitive piece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the finals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind bogging, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gling, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nadai four times. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday tennis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this piece would make you want to. Eight years later, when he visited india as part of a team fior the International Premier more for the International Premier Teleglous francies m surrounding him hadn't. him hadn't. The Indira Gandhi Stadlum was packed to the rafters for a tennis match! An ultimately meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive necessity (beyond the obvious) or title on offer — between Federar and Djokovic. Pete Sampas, Goran Ivanisevic, Jo-Wilfred Thonga, Sania Mirza, all featured in the spectacle. And because this Tsonga, Sania Mirza, all featured in the spectacle And because this is India, so did Akshay Kumar, Deepika Padukone and Aamir, Deepika Padukone and Aamir Khan. When Khan made a hash of a ceremonial Inaugural game and the septing count), the crowd grew nestless, almost booling, definitely laughing at every attempt. Get the amateurs off the court was the overall feeling in the stands. There was no disquising the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord, and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two actions exec, and say later, Twas there.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger* would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but Invisible cor that made

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup itself. This team tennis tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routhely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyne to left their hair down, and pose for laughing, smilling, camaraderie plctures. Its first three editions were a riotous success, with Federer the constant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curiously enough

it it rolled his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic have never played the tournament together.

The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandamic was a more blip. edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolic. Viewers were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already immense. Nadal and Diokovic are both scheduled to play in it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September.

Joining them will be Andy murray.
The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a success. Due to Federer of course.
And for Federer, too. The Laver
Cup, after all, exists pretty much as Federer's brainchild, and is as redered a balleting, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company Team8. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadai and Diokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess. It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Pederer, an It's imple economics after all. There is no one like Pederer, an one. An unremarkable man—outside of his 20 Grand Slam tides, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages —from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backbone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consid-one or every tennis parents awardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Uniqio makes of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph—breaking him away from a two decade partnership with Nike. The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have a considered the singest things to the was one of the biggest things to the was one of the single forbes' list of highest paid tennis players to the world Federer alsa never worn a Grand Slam with Unique, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing no tweer Unique on the tennis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federervense, a vital, if ultimately unproductive sold system in it. Ultimately and honestly, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'etrierd'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. ### The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

VAIBHAV RAGHUNANDAN New Deihi, 18 September

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote I, was RF's best season ever where he won 12 singles the where he won 12 singles the kind of the I wall was a standard of the I wall was the I wall was the I wall was to the I wall was the I wall was to be the I wall w and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind boggiling, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year hed isot to Nadai fourtimes. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday ternis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to.

Eight years later, when he visited india as part of a team for the International Premier Tennis League (IPT.), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bit). The religious fanalies im surrounding him hadn't. The lindra Gandhi sted in the second of the second of the control of the co

and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, 'I was there'.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Rogers' would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but invisible cog that made up the Federeverse, and the assorted diapopra it sprung.

We knew this would stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine stop sometime, mischine serena machine— the GOAT machine— the GOAT machine— the GOAT machine— the GOAT machine— the serena machine— the serena machine— the would say it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional carer away for good.

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well or scurrently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is currently unemployed for having soft wrong. Roger Federer is currently unmakent that is fust the service of the service Cup — a tournament that is just two years older than Covid-19, which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Lawer Cuplisself. This team tents tournament, which plits the best male players from Europe against the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as an oil of season soother. A chance for everyone to leit their hair down, and pose for laughing, smill, camaraderie pictures. Is first three editions were a rotous success, with Federer the constitution of the control of the control

stant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curiously enough his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and Novak Diokovic

Novak Djokovichave never played the tournament together.
The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp, None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered Gene the event, and in their absence, the twent, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolic. Viewers were more interested in grueiling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already immenses. Nadal and Djokovid are both scheduled to play in it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and Is guaranteed to be a cucess. Due to Federer of course. And for Federer, too. The Laver

as Federer's brainchild, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company TeamB. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal when — shocker — even nauai and Djokovic may be through, is and Djokovie may be through, is for anyone to guess. It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, an icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficency in five different languages—from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backhone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

whose rises kr. caps are the backbone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to onsider what Unique makes of all this.
The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018
Australian Open triumph
breaking him away from a two
decade partnership with Nike.
The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that
year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes'
list of highest paid tennis players in the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slams tin the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slams
since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing
up to wear Uniqlo on the tennis
court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federercrers, a vital,
if ultimately unproductive solar systems in it. Ultimately and honsettly, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'tettred'. His public appearances are rare, and social and and from the media engagement negligible.
The Federerverse survived on an aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal spin, and maximum reward. And herefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

 Limited to countries where telecom

operators provide eSIM support the eSIM makes it easy to entrol iterécom connections. However, it works only in countries with eSIM on offer by telecom operators.

In India, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium smartphones such as Samsung Galavy S-eries, Google Pixel series and Apple iPhones. This hybrid SIM arrangement is expected to remain the choice of combination for India-centric smartphones and is likely to trickle down to smartphones across price brackets.

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

VAIBHAV RAGHUNANDAN New Delhi, 18 September

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August in the New York Jimes in Algust 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the I7 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind boggiling, simply because it was rate ose aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year hed lost to Nadal dourt lines. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The piece of course never told you any of these facts. It was not many of these facts. It was not much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstand in the piece of the piec

and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, "was there."

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger* would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but Invisible cog that made up the Federerverse, and the assorted diaspora it sprung. We knew this would stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine — what remained rough was now he would say it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional carer away for good.

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well or its currently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is currently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer stelling from professional tennis, after his participation in the Laver Cup — a tournament that is just two years older than Covid-19, which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup itself. This team tennis tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as against the best male players of the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyone to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smiling, camaraderie pictures. Its first three editions were a riotous success, stant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curiously enough recorded — curiously enough its two great rivals Rafael Nadal and Novak Diokovic have never played the tournament together.

The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the curiously and the condensite. because after all, the Serena machine—
the GOAT machine
— did 'evolve away
from tennis' just a few weeks back.
What remained though was how
he would say it. And what we

Inter 2012 equiton — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp. None of the big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fund and frolk-viewers were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already immenses. Nadal and Djoković are both scheduled to ply in it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed in be a success. Due to Federer of course. And for Federer, too. The Laver Cup, after all, exists pretty much as Federer's brainchild, and is as rederer's brainchild, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company Team8. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadai and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess. It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, and it is not a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man—outside of his 20 Grand Slam to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages—from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backhone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Unique hands of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph—breaking him away from a two decade partnership with Nike. The Salom lillion ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that

The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes' list of highest pald tennis players in the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slam with Uniqlo, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing up to wear Uniqlo on the tennis court, just yet.

since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one siqueuing up to wear Uniqio on the tennis court, justyet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federerverse, a vital, if ultimately unproductive solar system in t. Ultimately and honestly. Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'retired'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. The Federerverse survived on an aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

september 19 was the day when the PFRDA When the PFRDA (Pension Fund Regulatory and Development Authority) Act was passed in 2013. Investors should use this occasion to review the performance of their National Pension System (NPS) account. They should also examine the key developments within NPS and understand their impact.

long-term portfolio, give higher welghtage to longer-term performance," says Vishal Dhawan, chief financial planner, Plan Ahead
Wealth Advisers.

Currently, the variation in the five-year performance of different PFMs is small (10-year returns are available for only a few PFMs). "Choose a PFM that is a large player in the find management space. PFM that is a large player in the fund management space, and for which the reputational risk is high," says Deepesh Raghaw, founder, PersonalFinancePlan, a Securities and Exchange Board of India-registered investment advisor.

see any capital losses," says See any capital losses," says Sumit Shukla, managing director and chief executive officer, Axis Pension Fund Management.

Learn about the exact nature of the guarantee before opting for it. "See whether the guarantee will be annual, as offered by EPF, or terminal, meaning the guaranteed rate will remain constant until retirement," says Dhawan.

To minimise variability in returns and meet the guarantee, fund managers take higher exposure to longer dated fixed income instruments like G-Sees and reduce equity exposure. This has a downside. "Younger investors in particular run the risk of giving up on the potential upside by opting for a guaranteed return scheme," says Dhawan.

Salaried workers who contribute to EPF already have

Defined benefit or defined contribution?

Detrined obsented or actined contribution? In its budget of February 2022, the Rajasthan state government announced it would opt out of NPS and revert to the old pension scheme (OPS). While NPS is a defined contribution scheme, OPS was defined benefit scheme.

"For anyone who manages long-term money, it is difficult to promise a particular rate of return since interest rates tend to witness a secular decline." says Dhawan.

to witness a secular decline, says Dhawan.
In 1997, the Public Provident Fund (PPF) offered 12 per cent; today it offers 71 per cent only. Bank fixed deposit rates have witnessed a similar decline. State government figures are also put get. asimilar decline. State government finances are also not getting stronger. This creates a real risk that a government promising a guaranteed rate of return (as the OPS does) could be forced to renege. Globally many governments have falled to offer pensioners the promised rate of return. This has prompted a large shift towards defined contribution schemes.

shift towards defined contrib-ution schemes.

In NPS, both the employer and the employee contribute upfront to an account that is in the employee's name. Even if the government's finances worsen, the employee's pen-sion is not at risk because the sion is not at risk because the money has already been put into his account.

It is true that there can be variability in the outcome offered by NPS. The launch of a minimum guaranteed return scheme will take care of that for conservative investors.

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

New Belhi, 18 September

Apple's decision to launch the eSIM-only Phone 14 series in the US has American buyers the US has American buyers buyered. Surprisingly, its umped some Indian folks, too, despite the availability of a physical SIM slot on the Indiacentric Phone 14 series. This is because a large number of Apple's consumers in India get their Phones at considerably cheaper rates from the US through their visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly about compatibility with Indian networks and eSIM availability in India. Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know Indian telecomperators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made Phones. Others would either buy India models or may looked the Phones are not expensive than from that US here the Capendre than from the US here the Capendre than from the US here the Capendre than from the US has the Capendre than from the US here the Capendre the Capendre than from the US here the Capendre than from the US here the Capendre than the Capendre than the Capendre the Capendre than the Capendre than the Capendre than the Capendre the Cape

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the finals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind bogging, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so compete that year was mind bog-gling, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nadal four times. He was human, chan-nelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstand-ing essay about an everyday ten-ins fan watching Federre play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to. Eight years later, when he vis-tred India as part of a team for the International Premier Tennis League (IPTL), his heavenly pow-ers had drained (If only a bit). The ers had drained (If only a bit). The religious finanticism surrounding him hadn't. The Indira Gandhi Stadium was packed to the rafters for a tennis matchi An ultimately meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive necessity (beyond the obvious) or title on offer — between Federer and Djokovic. Pete Sampras, Goran Ivanisevic, Jo-Wilfred Tonga, Sania Mirza, all featured in the spectacle. And because this is India. so did Akshav Kumar. in the spectacle. And because this is India, so did Akshay Kumar, Deepika Padukone and Aamir Khan. When Khan made a hash of a ceremonial inaugural game, unable to get his serve to cross the net (it took 12 goes, for anyone keeping count), the crowd greverstess, almost booling, definitely laughing at every attempt. Teet the amateurs off the court was the overall feeling in the stands. There was no disguising the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord, and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, Twas there.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger* would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but invisible cog that made up the Federerverse, and the assorted diaspora it sprung. We knew this would stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine — what remained though was now he would say it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional career away for good.

The announcement was sim-

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well or scurrently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is retting from professional tennis, after his participation in the Lawer Citim—a for unsarent that is list. Cup — a tournament that is just two years older than Covid-19, which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup lisself. This team term is tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players from Europe against the best male players to be world has routinely served as an end of season souther. A chance for everyone to let their halr down, and pose for laughing, smiling, camaraderie pictures. Its first three editions were a ridgous success.

and pose for laughing, smilling, camanderie pictures. Its first three diltions were a riotous success, with Federer the content of the riotous success, with Federer the content of the riotous supporting cast changing each year first folled his two great rivals rolled which was cancelled due to the decident of the riotous and rival edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor blip. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolic. Viewers were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is well represented the propersion of the propersion Immense, Nadal and Djokovic are both scheduled to play in it, and Joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a suc-cess. Due to Federer of course. And for Federer, too. The Laver Cup, after all, exists pretty much as Federer's brainchild, and is as rederer's oranichio, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company Teams. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess.

It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, an Icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man—outside of his 20 Grand Slam tides, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages—from hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the back-bone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

some on every teams parents awardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Uniqio makes of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph—breaking him away from a two characters of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time have his pened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes' list of highest paid tennis players in the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slam with Uniqio, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing up to wear Uniqio on the tennis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federer rene, a visal, if ultimately unproductive soil system init. Ultimately and honestly, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'etriterd'. His public appearances are rure, and social media engagement negligible. The Federer brain similar movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won Iz singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the finals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind boggling, simply because it was rare to see aesthericts and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nadal four times. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It was not man, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It was not much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday tennis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to.

Eight years later, when he visted India as part of a team for the International Premiler Tennis League (PITL), his heavenly powers had drained (If only a bit). The religious fanaticism surrounding him hadn't. The India Gandhi Sradium was packed to the rafters for a tennis matchi An ultimately meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive nonders of the proper of the proper of the owner. It was not disputed in the stands. There was no disguising at every amenty. Cet the annaturus off the court was the overall feeling in the stands. There was no disguising the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord.

and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, Twas there.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but ry and beprecise, because Roger* would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but invisible cog that made up the Federerverse, and the assorted diaspora it sprung. We know this would stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine stop sometime, machine che GoAT machine de would say it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional carer away for good.

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well of scurrently unemployed for having got twong. Roger Federer is currently unemployed for having got twongs. Roger Federer is currently unemployed for having got twongs. Roger Federer is currently unemployed in the Laver enting from professional tennis, after his participation in the Laver Cup — a tournament that is just after his participation in the Lave. Cup — a tournament that is just two years older than Covid-19, which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup listed. This team ten-is tournament, which plits the best male players from Europe against the best male players from Europe against the best male players the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyone to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smiling, camaraderie pletures. Its first three editions were a rotous success with Federer the consistency of the control of mis two great rivas and Nowak Djokovic have user played the tournament together. The 2021 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bip. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolic victions were more interested in Forbillags sport. What comes in Forbillags sport. The sport is sport to the forbillags the will be Andy Murray. The event ideks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a success. Due to Federer for Course.

cess. Due to Federer of course.

And for Federer, too. The Laver
Cup, after all, exists pretty much

as Federer's brainchild, and is as Federer's brainchild, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company Teams. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal and Djokovic may be through, is

and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess.
It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, an icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man—outside of his 20 Grand Slam tides, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages—from a small village in Switzerland. in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the back-a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RP caps are the backhone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Unique of the state of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Pederer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph—breaking him away from a two decade partnership with Nike. The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes list of highest paid tennis players in the world. Federer, also, never won a Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing up to wear Uniquio on the trenis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federer reas versus a state of the Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'terlierd'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible.

considered 'retired'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. The Federerverse survived on an aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

New Delhi, 18 September

pple's decision to launch the eSIM-only IPhone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surprisingly, it stumped some Indian folis, too, despite the availability of a physical SIA solt in the Indian centric IPhone 14 series. This is because a large number of Apple's consumers in Indiag et their IPhones at considerably cheaper rates from the US through heir visiting relatives, firends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly about compatibility with Indian networks and eSIM availability in India. Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know indiantelecomoperators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made iPhones. Others would either buy India models or may look at destinations such as Dutal, where IPhones are more expensive than from the US but still cheaper than India. "Given that IPhones from the US will require eSIM support from the US will require eSIM support from day one In India some tech-aware companies."

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the finals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind logging, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one of the season record season record programs of the season records of the season re to see aesthetics and efficiency of gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year hed jost to Nadai fourtimes. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday tennis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to.

man play live, then this plece would make you want to. Eight years later, when he vis-ited india as part of a team for the International Premier Tenus League (IPTL), his heavenly pow-ers had drained (if only a bit). The religious fanaticism surrounding him hadn't. The Indira Gandhl Stadium was packed to the rafters for a tennis match! An ultimately meaningless tennis match with for a tennis match! An ultimately meaningless tennis match with on the constitution of the constitution of

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger** would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but invisible cog that made

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup listelf. This team ternis tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. What remained though was how with Federer the con-stant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curlously enough his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and Novak Diokovic have Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic have never played the tournament together.

The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a few of the control of the contro and exact courson—the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp. None of the big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolk-views were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is where Federer's relitement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already immerses. Nadal and Djokovic are both scheduled to piay in it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a success. Due to Federer o course. And for Federer, too. The Laver Cup, after all, exists pretty much as Feders's brainchild, and is owned and run by his management company Teams. The tournament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadai and Diolowic may be through, is for anyone to guess. It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Pedere, an It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Pedere, and con, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man outside of his 20 Grand Slam dides, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike Re Teaps are the backbone of every tennis parent's sardobs.

in the different languages—from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backbone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Uniquio makes of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018. Australian Open ritumph—breaking him away from a two decade partnership with Nike. The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes' list of highest pald tennis players in the world. Federer, also, never won a Grand Slam with Uniquo, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing up to wear Uniquo on the tennis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federerverse, a vital, fultimately unproductive solar system in it. Ultimately and honsity, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'tettred'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. The Federerverse survived on an aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to therefore.

spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

Rew Delh, 18 Spetember

pple's decision to launch the eSIM-only Pibnone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surprisingly, it summed some Indian folks, too, despite the availability of a physical SIM slot in the Indian-centric Pibnore 14 series. This because a large number of Apple's consumers in India get their Pibnore at considerably cheaper rates from the US through heir visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly about compatibility with Indian networks and eSIM availability in Indian Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know Indian telecomoperators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made iPhones. Others would either buy India models or may look at destinations such as Dubal, where the IPhones are more expensive than from the US but still cheaper than India. "Given that IPhones from the US will require eSIM support from day one there," said Frabhu Ram, head-Industry Intelligence Group at Cyberndedla Research (CMR). For others, it will be prudent to buy new IPhones in India."

Security is another plus of the sSIM. It can't be taken out, and so cannot be misused. For international travellers, the eSIM makes it easy to enrol for tele-com connections. However, it works only in countries with eSIM on offer by telecom operators.

In India, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium smartphones such as Samsung Galavy S-ceries, Google Pixel series and Apple iPhones. This hybrid SIM arrangement is expected to remain the choice of combination for India-centric smartphones and is likely to trickle down to smartphones across price brackets.

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

New Dehi, 18 September

David Foster Wallace's definitive piece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the linals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind bogor 142-5. Sitte, watching Federer compete that year was mind beggillag, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nadai four times. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday ternis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to.

Eight years later, when he visited india as part of a team for the International Premier Tennis ted india as part of a team for the International Premier Tennis Stadium was part of a team for the International Premier Tennis Stadium was packed to the ratters for a tennis match! An ultimately meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive man Djokovic. Pete Sampras, Goran Ivanisevic, Jo-Wilfred Tonoga, Sania Mirza, all featured in the spectacle. And because this is India, so did Akshay Kumar, Deepika Padukone and Annif. Khan. When Khan made a hash of a ceremonal languaril game unable to get his serve to cross the keeping count, the crowd purple was the count of the count was the overall celling in the stands. There was no deliguiling the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord.

and partake in the religious expe-rience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, Twas there. And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

and say later, 'I was there'.
And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.
Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger's would like that. What will you miss the constitution of the constitution of

This is obviously a big boost for the Lawer Cup lised. This team term is tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players from Europe against the best male players the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyone to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smilling, camaraderle pictures. Its first three editions were a rotous success with Federer the constant presence in stant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curiously enough his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and

Rafael Nadal and Nava Discovic have never played the tournament together. The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffrend. Gone were the days of fun and frolic. Viewers were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Federer's retirement comes In. Team Europe's line up is already immense. Nadal and Djokovic are both scheduled to play In it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a success. Due to Federer of course.

And for Federer, too. The Laver
Cup, after all, exists pretty much

as Federer's brainchild and is as Federer's brainchild, and is owned and run by his management company TeamB. The tournament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal when — shocker — even Nadal and Djokovic may be through, is

and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess.
It's simple economics after all.
There is no one like Federer, an icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man—outside of his 20 Grand Slam tiles an unreasenable talent to titles, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the back-whose Nike RF caps are the back-bone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course. It will be interesting to consid-er what Uniqlo makes of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph — breaking him ware. signed on Péderer after his 2018

Australian Open Irlumph
breaking him away from a two
decade partnership with Nike.
The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that
year, and came about at a time
when Pederer had topped Forbes'
list of highest paid tennis players in the world. Federer, ails, never won a Grand Slam with Uniqlo, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Pederer, no one is queuing
up to wear Uniqlo on the tennis
court, just yet.
Brand building is but a small

court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federerverse, a vital,
if ultimately unproductive solar system in it. Ultimately and honestly, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'retlied'. His public considered 'retired'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. The Federerverse survived on an aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US ple's decision to launch the estM-only iPhone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surphisingly, its sumped some Indian folks, too, despite the availability of a physical SIM slot in the Indiacentic iPhone 14 series. This is because a large number of Apple's consumers in India get their iPhones at considerably cheaper rates from the US through their visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are most about compatibility with Indian networks and eSIM availability in India. Analysts believe tech-aware conwors and esim availability in India.

Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know Indian telecom operators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made iPhones. Others would either buy India models or may look at destinations such as Dubal, where the desunations such as Dubal, where the Phones are more expensive than from the US but still cheaper than India. "Given that Phones from the US will require eSIM support from day one in India, some tech-aware consumers may still continue to buy Phones from them." and Parablus Pages 1979. may sun commute to Duy iPhones from there," sald Prabhu Ram, head-Industry Intelligence Group at CyberMedia Research (CMR), "For oth-ers, it will be prudent to buy new iPhones in India."

words, a smartphone with eSIM can save multiple SIM profiles. This enables convenience, especially for those who convenience, especially for those who carry more than one active connection. Security is another plus of the eSIM. If early be taken out, and so cannot be misused. For international travellers, the eSIM makes it easy to enrol for telectom connections. However, it works only in countries with eSIM on offer by telecom operators.

In india, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium smartphones such as Samsung Galaxy S-series, Google Pakel series and Apple Phones. This hybrid SIM arrangement is expected to remain the choice of com-

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August

and the New York Inters in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the life of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind boggiling, simply because it was rare competed the sure of the season of the season sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nadal four times. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never tool you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday ternis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to. Elght years later, when he visited India as part of a team for the lategue (PITL), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bit). The league (PITL), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bit). The lategue (PITL), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bit). The lategue (PITL), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bit). The lategue (PITL), his heavenly powers had drained (if only a bit). The international Premier Tennis for a tennis match! An ultimately meaningless tennis match with no ranking points, competitive necessity (beyout the obvious) or title on offer — between Federer and Djekovic, Pete Sampra, Goran Ivanisevic, Jo-Wilfred Tsonga, Sania Mitza, all featured Inthe spectacle. And because this is India, so did Aksay Kumar, Jo-Eppika Padukone and Aamil Deepika Padukone and Aamir Khan. When Khan made a hash of a ceremonial inaugural game, unable to get his serve to cross the net (it took 12 goes, for anyone keeping count), the crowd grew restless, almost booling, definitely laughing at every attempt. Cet the amateurs off the court was the overall feeling in the stands. There was no disguising the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord, and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, Twas there.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger* would like that. What will you miss the most? You, an essential, but invisible cog that made up the Federerverse, and the assorted diaspora it sprung. We knew this would stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine — what remained trough was now he would say it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional career away for good.

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well or seurrently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is retiring from professional tennis, after his participation in the Laver Cup — a tournament that is just two years older than Covid-19, which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup listed. This team tents tournament, which plits the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as and of season soother. A chance for everyone to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smill, camanderie plctures. Its first three editions were a rotous success, with Federer the constant of the control of th supporting cast changing each year — curlously enough his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and stant presence in Team Europe, his because after all, the Serena machine—

the GOAT machine
— did 'evolve away
from tennis' just a few weeks back.
What remained though was how
he would say it. And what we

In Silve Real Padal and Novak Djokovic have were played the tournament together.

The 2021 edition — the 2020 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolic. Viewers were more interested in gruelling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already immense. Natai and Djokovic are both scheduled to play in it, and continued to the propersion of the pr 23 and is guaranteed to be a suc-cess. Due to Federer of course. And for Federer, too. The Laver Cup, after all, exists pretty much as Federer's brainchild, and is a owned and run by his manage-ment company Team8. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attracts some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess.

for anyone to guess.

It's simple economics after all.
There is no one like Federer, an icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into and profit machine rolled Into one. An unremarkable man — outside of his 20 Grand Slam titles, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the back-a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike R Caps are the backbone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to onsider what Uniqio makes of all this, the Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph—breaking him away from a two decade partnership with Nike. The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes' list of highest pald tennis players in the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slam with Uniqio, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is questing up to wear Uniquio no be tennis.

since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is query on the tennis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small jart of the Federervene, a valial, if ultimately unproductive solar system int. Ultimately and honestly, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'retired'. His public appearances are rare, and solal media engagement negligible. The Federervenes survived on a uara of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal effort, minimal why and movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal why minimal effort, minimal why and many minimal effort, minimal why and many minimal effort, minimal why and many minimal why and many minimal effort, minimal why and many minimal why and many minimal why and many minimal why minimal effort, minimal why and many minimal why and many minimal why and many minimal why and many minimal why and minimal w spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

pple's decision to launch the eSIM-only iPhone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surprisingly, it sumped some Indian folks, too, despite the availability of a physical SIM slot in the Indiacentric iPhone 14 series. This is because centric l'Phone l'4 series. This is because a large number of Apple's consumers in India get their l'Phones at consider-ably cheaper rates from the US through their visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly about compatibility with Indian net-works and eSIM availability in India.

WHAT'S eSIM

An eSIM (embedded SIM) is a reprogrammable chip integrated within the smartphone

Pros

We You can have more than one phone number

- Easier to activate than physical SIM cards = Easier to port to another operator
- Handy for frequent international travellers

Limited to countries

where telecom operators provide eSIM support

words, a smartphone with eSIM can save multiple SIM profiles. This enables convenience, especially for those who carry more than one active connection. Security is another plus of the eSIM. It can't be taken out, and so cannot be misused. For international travellers, the eSIM makes it easy to enroit for telecom connections. However, it works only in countries with eSIM on offer by telecom operators.

In India, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium smartphones such as Samsung Galaxy S-series, Google Pixel series and Apple (Phones: This livid SIM maragement is expected to remain the choice of combination for India-centric smartphones and is likely to trickle down to smartphones across price brackets.

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the finals in an astounding 16 of the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind bogging, simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so eloriously come together in one

gling simply because it was rare to see aesthetics and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sententer being. But even then, that very year hed lost to Nadal fourdmes. He was hed lost to Nadal fourdmes. He was human, channelling something close to divine. The plece of course never told you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday temis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece would make you want to. Eight years later, when he visited lindia as part of a tram for the International Premier Tennis League (PPTL), his heavenly powers had drained (flonly abit). The religious fanaticism surrounding him hadn't. The Indira Gandhi Stadium was packed to the rafters rea tennis match Man ultimately meaningless tennis match With or anking points, competitive necessity (beyond the obvious) or title on offer — between Federer and Djokovic. Pete Sampras, Goran I vanisevic, Jo-Wilfred Toonga, Sania Mirra, all featured inthe spectacle, and because this is India, so did Alshay Kumar, Deepika Padukone and Aamir is the special cand because this is India, so did Akshay Kumar, Deepika Padukone and Aamir Khan. When Khan made a hash of a ceremonlai inaugural game, unable to get his serve to cross the net (it took 12 goes, for anyone keeping count), the crowd greverstes, almost booling, definitely laughing at every attempt. Tee the amateurs of the court was the overall feeling in the stands. There was no disguising the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord, and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action school through and that smooth two action school and and and smooth two action school and so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain. Take a moment, a long moment if you wish, but try and be precise, because Roger<sup>500</sup> would like that. What will you miss the most You, an essential hurting-like that. What will y most? You, an essenti-ible cog that made up the Federerverse, and the assorted diaspora it sprung. We knew this would stop sometime, because after all, the stop sometime, because after all, the Serena machine—the GOAT machine—did 'evolve away from tennis' just a few weeks back. What remained though was how the would asy it. And what we would miss most, once the great man put his professional carer away for good.

The announcement was simple. There was no wordplay, no in-betweens, no pause left to make space for a comeback. Whoever wrote this either didn't understand PR wordplay well or surrently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is currently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is currently unemployed for having got it wrong. Roger Federer is which is really saying all you need to know about it.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup itself. This team tennis tournament, which pits the best male players from Europe against the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyno to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smilling, camanaderie plctures. Its first three editions were a riotous success, and the supporting cast changing seach year curiously enough his two great rivals and Norak Djolovic have never played the tournament together.

The 2021 edition — the 2020, edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor bilp. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gone were the days of fun and frolle. Viewers were more interested in grueilling sport. Which is where Federer's retirement comes in. Team Europe's line up is already Immense. Nadal and Djokovic are both scheduled to play in it, and joining them will be Andy Murray. The event kicks off on September 23 and is guaranteed to be a success. Due to Federer of course.

And for Federer, too. The Laver Cup, after all, exists pretty much owned and run by his manage-ment company Team8. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadal and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone toguess.

It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, an Icon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man — outside of his 20 Grand Slam titles, an unreasonable talent to hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from five different languages — from hit a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backbone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Uniqlo makes of all this.

It will be interesting to considere what Unique makes of all this. The Japanese clothing brand had signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open triumph breaking him mawy from a two decade partnership with Nike. The Sa0o-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer and topped Forbes list of highest padd tennis players in the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slam with Uniquo and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing up to wear Uniquo on the tennis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federer; eas, vital if ultimately unproductive sold system in it. Ultimately and honselty, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'etried'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. The Federerverse survived on an aura of the milimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, miching with minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, miching with minimal with minimal with minimal with minimal effort, miching with miching with minimal effort, miching with minimal effort, miching with minimal effort, miching with miching with minimal effort, miching with minimal effort, miching with michi

aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?

Buyers in a fix with eSIM-only handset

Though the physical SIM slot in the India-centric iPhone 14 series is available, many get their iPhones much cheaper from the US

ple's decision to launch the estM-only iPhone 14 series in the US has American buyers puzzled. Surprisingly, its unuped some Indian folks, too, despite the availability of a physical SIM slot in the Indiacentric iPhone 14 series. This is because a large number of Apple's consumers in India get their iPhones at considerably cheaper rates from the US through their visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly et al. Their apprehensions are mostly their visiting relatives, friends, family, et al. Their apprehensions are mostly about compatibility with Indian networks and eStM availability in India. Analysts believe tech-aware consumers who know Indiantelecom operators offer eSIM services may still go for US-made Bhones. Others would either buy India models or may look at destinations such as Dubal where the Phones are more expensive than from the US but still cheaper than India. "Given that Phones from the US will require eSIM suproor from day one

"Given that iPhones from the US will require eSiM support from day one in India, some tech-aware consumers may still continue to buy iPhones from there," sald Prabbu Ram, head-Industry Intelligence Group at CyberMedia.Research (CMR). "For oth-

"A distant home for many Indians, "A distant home for many Indians, Dubal is illey to be the destination of choice for the iPhone buyers this year because these phones are cheaper iPhone In their and come with a physical SIM slot. So, consumers get the iPhone of choice (with physical SIM) art a cheaper price. It is a win-win situation," said Falsal Kawosa, Chief Analyst, Techarc.

Apple has been a trend-setter in the global smartphone market chip in that has been unapologedically copied by other brands. The removal of the charging adapter, are cases in point.

- Easier to activate than physical SIM cards
- Easier to port to another operator

Handy for frequent international travellers

Likewise, the focus on eSIM-only smartphones is expected to gather steam now that Apple has initiated the trend. "The launch of the eSIM-only iPhone 14 variant in the US indicates that the winds of change are very much here, despite all the transitory challenges with technol-ogy adoption at scale, in the near to short term," centric sald Ram.

An eSIM (embedded SIM) is a reprogrammable chip integrated within the smartphone. It has its advantages and disadvantages, but is certainly better than the physical SIM. This is because the eSIM is reprogrammable, and can store multiple unique identifiers. In simple words, a smartphone with eSIM can save multiple SIM profiles. This enables convenience, especially for those who carry more than one active connection. Security is another plus of the eSIM. It can't be taken out, and so cannot be misused. For international travellers, the eSIM makes it easy to enrol for relection connections. However, it works only in countries with eSIM on offer by telection operators.

In India, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium

In India, the eSIM has been available alongside physical SIM in premium smartphones such as Samsung Galaxy S-series, Google Pixel series and Apple iPhones. This hybrid SIM arrangement sexpected to remain the choice of combination for India-centric smartphones and is likely to trickle down to smartphones across price brackets.

The retirement of Lord Federer: All that Federerverse will miss

Washu Racifium and washing to the New Delhi, 18 September

David Foster Wallace's definitive plece 'Roger Federer as a Religious Experience', came out in the New York Times in August 2006. The year he wrote it, was RF's best season ever — one where he won 12 singles titles, three Grand Slams, reached the 17 tournaments he took part in and ended with a season record of 92-5. Sure, watching Federer compete that year was mind boggiling, simply because it was rate compete that year was mind boggiling, simply because it was rate so sea eastheties and efficiency so gloriously come together in one sentient being. But even then, that very year he'd lost to Nada nealing something close to divine. The plece of course never tod you any of these facts. It wasn't on much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an autstanding essay about an everyday ternis fan watching Federer play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece wood make you was to the work of the washing and the washing and the washing hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece wood make you washing and the washing hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this plece wood make you washing and the work of the washing hadn't hadn't you any of these facts. It wasn't so much a story of journalistic excellence, as it was an outstanding essay about an everyday tensifan watching Federe play. If you hadn't ever seen the great man play live, then this piece would make you want to. Eight years later, when he visited India as part of a team for the International Premier Tennic League (IPTL), his heavenly powers had drained (If only ab h). The religious fanatcism surrounding him hadn't. The Indira Gandila Stadium was packed to the rafters for a tennis match an ultimate herea and the proposition of the count was the world was how the would was you can be provided to a ceremonal inaugural gare. The was no wordplay, no experies, a daudione and hash of a ceremonal inaugural gare would miss most, once the great way for good.

The was no wordplay, no encounter was simple. There was no wordplay, no lenderstand PR wordplay well or learned to the counter was simple. There was no wordplay, no lenderstand PR wordplay well or learned to the word of the court was no disguising the reason they were there — to ogle at the lord.

and partake in the religious experience. To take in the backhand, and that smooth two action serve, and say later, I was there.

And so, now that it is done, memories are all that remain.

This is obviously a big boost for the Laver Cup lised. This team tents tournament, which plits the best male players from Europe against the best male players from Europe against the best male players of the world has routinely served as an end of season soother. A chance for everyone to let their hair down, and pose for laughing, smilling, camaraderie pletures. Its first three editions were a rotous success with Federer the constant of the c

stant presence in Team Europe, his supporting cast changing each year — curiously enough his two great rivals Rafael Nadal and

In two great rivais and Nowak Djokovic have unever played the tournament together. The 2021 edition was cancelled due to the pandemic — was a minor blip. None of the Big three attended the event, and in their absence, the ratings surely suffered. Gons were the days of fun and frolic. Viewers were more shown of the Big three attended to greatly a sport. Which is where Federor's retitement comes in remaining sport. Which is where Federor's retitement comes in Federor's retitement comes between the common state of the second point of the secon

cess. Due to Federer of course.

And for Federer, too. The Laver
Cup, after all, exists pretty much

as Federer's brainchild, and is owned and run by his manage-ment company TeamB. The tour-nament may go on, and to be fair, it does attract some of the best in the business, but whether it will survive the end of this decade survive the end of this decade when — shocker — even Nadai and Djokovic may be through, is for anyone to guess. It's simple economics after all. There is no one like Federer, an iteon, a brand, a glory machine and profit machine rolled into one. An unremarkable man — outside of his 20 Grand Slam titles, an unreasonable talent to hir a backhand and proficiency in five different languages — from a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backhone of every tennis parent's a small village in Switzerland, whose Nike RF caps are the backbone of every tennis parent's wardrobe. They don't make them anymore of course.

It will be interesting to consider what Unique on the standard was signed on Federer after his 2018 Australian Open trumph breaking him away from a two decade partnership with Nike. The $300-million ten-year deal was one of the biggest things to have happened in tennis that year, and came about at a time when Federer had topped Forbes' list of highest paid tennis players in the world. Federer, alsa, never won a Grand Slam with Uniqlo, and has in fact worn them on court in a mere two Grand Slams since 2020. Safe to say, that despite Federer, no one is queuing up to wear Uniqlo on the tennis court, just yet.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federersee, a vital full full markey wishal.

Brand building is but a small part of the Federerverse, a vital, if ultimately unproductive solar system in it. Ultimately and hon-estly, Federer has been away from tennis long enough to be considered 'retired'. His public considered 'retired'. His public appearances are rare, and social media engagement negligible. The Federerverse survived on an aura of the minimal. Minimal movement, seemingly minimal effort, minimal whip, minimal spin, and maximum reward. And therefore it becomes crucial to examine the question: what will you miss most?
